

Name: _____ Date: _____ Period: _____

Current Events Response Sheet

Title of Article: _____

Who: _____

What: _____

When: _____

Where: _____

Why or How: _____

 A cartoon character with a large blue head and a long, pointed beak, shouting with its mouth wide open. There are sound waves around its head.	One question I have about the event:
 A cartoon character with a green body and a large head, running quickly while carrying a yellow folder under its arm. There are motion lines behind it.	Another question I have about the event:
 A cartoon character with a green body and a large head, holding a large yellow sheet of paper in front of it. There are question marks above its head.	A final question I have is:

Don't forget to glue, tape, or staple your article to the back of this sheet.

Name: _____ Date: _____ Period: _____

Current Events Response Sheet

Title of Article: _____

Who: _____

What: _____

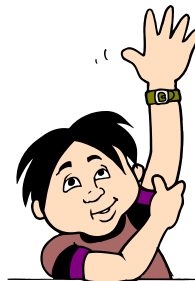

When: _____

Where: _____

Why or How: _____

Questioning the Text

Pretend that you are a teacher and you have just read this current event to your third grade class. What questions do you think your students might have? Write the questions below.

Don't forget to glue, tape, or staple your article to the back of this sheet.

Name: _____ Date: _____ Period: _____

Current Events Response Sheet

Title of Article: _____

Who: _____

What: _____

When: _____

Where: _____

Why or How: _____

Pretend that you are a reporter for CBS News. You are going to do a follow-up story on this current event. Write three questions you would ask of the person/people mentioned in this article. (Remember, the CBS is paying you $125,000 a year to report on the news. Make sure you ask probing, thoughtful, intelligent questions.)

1.

2.

3.